Els Mommers displays fibre art images of Saba

SABA--Over 65 people showed up at The Peanut Gallery in Windwardside to attend the opening of Els Mommers' fibre art exhibition entitled "Rhapsody in Colour: Fibre Art Images of Saba."

The opening remarks were held by Island Governor Jonathan Johnson, who recalled the time when he was Mommers' student at the time she taught at Saba Comprehensive School.

The art quilts were well-received, with the majority of the pieces selling during the opening night.

Mommers, who had been working on the art collection for over seven months, was delighted. She spoke of her inspiration after a visit to Holland a year ago. The artist had been previously involved with native crafts, quilted from molas made by the Kuna Indians she had visited during her travels in Panama.

She was particularly pleased with the arrangement by art gallery owners Jim and Judy Stewart and their successful event hosting.
